Abstract (en)

[origin: WO0163840A1] The present invention provides a method and system for creating combined reports such as charging or traffic records. The communication system comprises at least two networks. Information on charges accumulated in one network are sent to the other network which creates a combined charging record combining its own charging information with the charging information received from the other network. This concept can also be used for creating combined reports of other types such as traffic reports.
