Abstract (en)

[origin: EP1270156A2] The hollow body producing process involves preparing individual elements (1) to form segments of the body, each with two connection surfaces. The elements are laid against each other to produce a blank for the hollow body with flat closed outer surface, applying a strip of adhesive to this surface, turning the group round, joining the connecting surfaces and winding up the individual elements to form the closed hollow body (2), to which another strip of adhesive is then applied. A device for implementing the process is also described.
