Abstract (en)
[origin: EP1279352A1] The table has a top consisting of center and side panels (3,4,5), connected by hinges (6), so that the sides can be folded down and into a position projecting upwards over the center. A table frame (1) has a main body (7) fastened to the center panel, with support arms (8,8') fastened to it pivoted. These can be moved between a first position to support the center panel, and a second position supporting one or both sides. Table legs (9) are fastened to the ends of the arms away from the main body. A connection lever with locking element can be connected to the support arm of a second table.
