Abstract (en)
[origin: WO0201947A1] A cultivation box (1-7) for shells, for example scallop shells, for use when cultivating shells in water, and where the cultivation boxes (1-7) are designed to be handled mechanically in connection with harvesting and tending of the shells, and also when cleaning the cultivation box. Several cultivation boxes (1-7) may be stacked on top of each other in a column (8) during a cultivation phase in water, and then singly be lifted apart by subsequent handling on a boat or on shore. Each cultivation box (1-7) is separably attached to any overlying and/or underlying cultivation box (1-7), and possibly separably attached to a cover (16) and/or a frame footing (18) of an associated box frame (10) for the cultivation boxes (1-7), and where each cultivation box is provided with side walls (33-40) separably and/or rotatably attached to the associated base (48, 50) of the box (1-7), so that the side walls (33-40) may be removed from or rotated relative to the associated base (48, 50).
