Abstract (en)

An electronic transaction by that a payment amount is deducted from a customer account (601) to a provider account (602) is prepared in cooperation between an account computer (901) and a browser-enabled customer computer (902). The account computer (901) forwards invoice and credit information as well as calculation instructions in portions (210, 220) of a page (200) to the customer computer (902). The customer computer (902) interprets a first page portion (210) by a browser to present different invoice items and credit items on a screen; receives a user selection of invoice and credit items; calculates the payment amount by offsetting the amounts of the invoice and credit items with instructions in a second page portion (220); and returns a response (250) with the payment amount to the account computer (901). <IMAGE>
