Abstract (en)

[origin: DE10101234A1] The method involves testing with data to be stored and integrated into a programming process. At least one test pattern based on data to be stored is produced so data can be automatically regenerated at least from the last test pattern generated. A process that is performed at least once involves producing a test pattern, write access to memory with the pattern, read access to acquire a test result and comparison with the pattern for agreement.
