Abstract (en)
A combination curtain and blind arrangement is constructed to include a Venetian blind and a plurality of curtains. The Venetian blind has a headrail, a bottom rail, a plurality of slats, and a lift cord and tilt cord unit adapted for joining the headrail, the bottom rail and the slats and keeping the slats arranged between said headrail and said bottom rail. The curtains are respectively formed of a piece of fabric defining a cover face and at least one suspension face extended from the cover face. The cover face of each curtain has an insertion hole unit for the passing of the lift cord and tilt cord unit for enabling the cover face of each curtain to be covered on one slat to hold the at least one suspension face of the respective curtain suspended from the corresponding slat. <IMAGE>
