Abstract (en)

[origin: DE19913096A1] The invention relates to a method and a device for electronically processing buying and selling operations using public communications networks. An order data transfer is carried out by means of a personal computer (1) via an exchange (3). The goods received or the services provided can be paid for without transmitting data that has security implications over the Internet (5), by means of menu-supported accounts access to the exchange, using a process that is similar to preparing a telephone bill.
