Abstract (en)
The sandal, made from a water-resistant and especially a plastic material, consists of an upper and a sole in two layers (4, 8). The upper layer of the sole has a sloping surface (8a), angled at about 3.5 degrees and covered with projections (9) 4 - 12 mm long that support the feet. The sloping surface of the sole leads to slots or holes (11), preferably 7 - 10 mm in diameter, in the sole's raised edges (7) to shed any water that collects on the inner surface of the sandal.
