Abstract (en)

[origin: EP1396565A1] In a textile knitting process to make the ribbed section forming part of a hosiery garment, a mesh is formed by each needle forming part of the non-ribbed section, on a flatbed knitting machine esp. having two facing needle beds. The visible aspect of the rib-knitted section is formed by one, or two neighbouring plain stitches, following which two needles form no stitches. To create the reverse stitch on the needles on the opposing needle bed, one needle forms a reverse stitch and a second needle forms no stitch. Also claimed is a commensurate knitted hosiery garment.
