Abstract (en)
[origin: WO03005240A1] A crawler (54) installed on a web server (50) crawls web pages (52) on a web site and produces a list over web pages (52) present on the web site. This list is compared with a similar list from a former crawling. Changes in the list, classified as new, changed or deleted web pages, are reported in a modification list and transmitted to a central web change server. The data are transmitted further to a search engine which updates its index based on the modification list. Several variations of this are also disclosed.
