Abstract (en)
[origin: WO03027403A1] According to the inventions, the fixing of plumbing fixtures is carried out using a profiled section having an integrally closed channel on its periphery. Said channel is arranged behind one front side of the profiled section so that it is not directly visible, said channel being further adjacent to the front side of the profiled section. The provision of a slot in the front side of the profiled section enables to open the channel over a predetermined length. A plumbing fixture can be fixed in the undercut slot thus produced.
