Abstract (en)

[origin: WO0135191A2] An electronic apparatus for facilitating electronic commerce has a host computer having a processor, a memory and a communications interface. The host computer is programmed to generate an electronic itemized statement including a series of transaction line items, where the line items include customer purchase data. At least one of the transaction line items includes a hyperlink to a merchant page which corresponds to an electronic commerce site of the merchant pertaining to that transaction line item.
