Abstract (en)
[origin: WO03062166A2] The invention relates to a method of treating organic pollution on a substrate made from glass, oxide or any other essentially mineral or metallic material having a functional character owing to the fact that it comprises: one or more stacked layers and/or a specific surface morphology. The inventive method is characterised in that it consists of electrical treatment, ozone UV treatment or flame treatment, optionally followed by washing. The invention also relates to: devices that are used to perform the above-mentioned method; the application of said method in relation to hydrophilic and/or oleophilic glazing; and glazing which is treated by said method and which is intended for a transport vehicle, a building, street furniture, an internal or external decorative element or an electric household appliance.
