Abstract (en)
A pipetting head is provided for dispensing small volumes of liquid. The pipetting head comprises a dispensing tube from one end of which liquid can be ejected in use; a supply tube through which liquid is supplied to the other end of the dispensing tube in use; and means for moving the supply tube and the dispensing tube relatively towards one another, thereby reducing the volume of liquid which can be contained in the supply and dispensing tubes to cause liquid to be ejected from the one end of dispensing tube opposite the supply tube. <IMAGE>
