Abstract (en)

A supporting framework (7) for supporting strips (6) of a mold for ceramic tiles provided with a die (3) can be extracted, in inactive conditions, by means of a lateral (or longitudinal) extractor of the drawer-like type, which is inserted in a seat (8, 9) formed in the die and contains, in addition to the supporting framework (7), at the inlet of the seat, a transverse bar (10) for longitudinal and vertical locking, to be removed for drawer-like extraction; the supporting framework is used in ceramic factories to avoid disassembling the die (3) when it is necessary to replace worn strips (6) or to obtain different thicknesses of tiles of the same format or variations of the profile of the edges of the tile. <IMAGE>
