Abstract (en)

[origin: WO2004035886A2] The invention relates to a device for attaching a card clothing to a roller with a roller drive unit and a brake device acting on the card clothing to generate a winding tension in the region of the card clothing between the roller and braking device. In order to be able to better record the attaching process a force measuring device is provided which is embodied for measurement of the force acting at a mounting point of the braking device, essentially longitudinal to an attachment direction of the card clothing.
