Abstract (en)
[origin: WO2004047578A1] The invention relates to an item of protective footwear comprising a profiled sole. The profiled sole comprises at least one section, which is optically distinguishable from the remaining part of the sole and which can be perceived when the profile has been subjected to a certain amount of wear. To this end, a safety feature is provided that instructs to the wearer of the item of protective footwear to replace the shoe when a certain minimum profile depth is reached.
