Abstract (en)

[origin: WO2004068427A1] The invention relates to the integration of bank transactions or other transactions in the commercial field, especially the settlement of cash payments and withdrawals. According to the invention, a client initiates the desired cash transaction at a client terminal and the payment or withdrawal occurs at the cash terminal. As a result, it is possible to integrate cash transactions in the commercial field, since the actual payment or withdrawal steps are carried out at the cash terminal by the cashier. It is therefore not necessary for the client to locate a cash point or a bank in order to withdraw cash as he/she can handle said transaction when shopping. The invention also enables other transactions, for example, lottery games to be carried out at the client terminal, which can then be paid at the cashpoint terminal.
