The container has a locking device (30) comprising blocking units (31) pivoting with respect to a support for a tank between a retracted and locking positions. The tank has recesses in which the units are engaged when the units are in the locking position and the tank is in the utilization position. The blocking units are guided by lateral walls of the tank when the tank is rotated towards the utilization position. Independent claims are also included for the following: (1) a method for mounting a tank on a support of a container (2) a method for manipulating a tank with a container.
