Abstract (en)

[origin: WO2005059267A1] The invention relates to a method for producing suspended ceilings or walls from gypsum plasterboards, wherein the individual gypsum plasterboards are mounted and the gaps between the individual boards are bridged over. The inventive method is characterized by laying the gypsum plasterboards (1, 2) in such a manner as to achieve as small a gap width as possible and by applying a cover strip (10) to the gaps (3).
