Abstract (en)

A description is given of a device for anchoring the blind fabric to the roller of a roller blind, comprising a securing element which can be attached to a corresponding lateral edge of the fabric and can be housed and retained in a seating extending axially in the roller, so as to secure the edge to the roller-blind roller, in which the securing element comprises a hook appendage which can be inserted frontally into the seating, transversely to the direction of axial development of the roller and having a form such as to be retained in the seating when the fabric is rolled onto or unrolled from the roller-blind roller so as to anchor the edge of the fabric to the roller.
