Abstract (en)

The glove has an anti-reversal unit with a check strap (9) that is flexible, mechanically resistant and has low elongation under traction. The strap is mounted between an end (9a) fixed to ends of digital parts for the index and little fingers and an anchoring zone situated at the level of the wrist part. The strap is placed between an outer layer of the glove and an inner liner. A removable blocking unit blocks the strap in the zone. The length of the strap is determined such that the strap is in a tight state when the hand has a given angular arrangement. The strap receives forces related to a ball impact observed by the index finger.
