Abstract (en)

[origin: WO2005065299A2] The present system provides information on risks and related hedging strategies. A plurality of client terminals are coupled to the system, for providing access to the system for accessing information on risks and related hedging strategies. A data aggregation module is configured to store financial and risk related information from a plurality of data sources, including private client data sources and public data sources. An analytical module is coupled to the data aggregation module, and configured to perform benchmarking estimates based on information retrieved from the private client data sources and the public data sources. The benchmarking estimates are performed against the private data and the public data obtained from a plurality of industries.
