Abstract (en)

The device has telescopic units (20) movable from a place- and space-saving storage position into a telescope-like arranged active position within the sensitive object by drive units. Each unit (20) has an attachment with wire units (28) at its distal end, where the units (28) are movable from the storage position into an active position, where the wire units are spread out from the attachment and are spread away from the unit (20) in the active position. The units (20) are distributed on a roof of the object, so that the wire units approximately cover the object in the active position.
