Abstract (en)

[origin: EP1745941A2] The triple cutter transports the block to the head and foot cutting points (A, B) and in the next cycle on to the front cutting point (C), transporting it over the actual cutting position and then pushing it back. The edges are then separated, e.g. by suction, and pushed into narrow diversion channels. The front of the interior is then cut under almost full pressure. The edges are subsequently pulled out of the diversion channels.
