Abstract (en)

[origin: EP1776890A1] The method involves cutting respective ends of two assemblies so that each assembly includes two sections whose two ends are moved in longitudinal directions. The ends of the assemblies are engaged in an elongated mono block rectilinear plate (10) having a longitudinal groove (20) adapted to receive closure or anchoring units of the sections and two blades (30, 32) surrounding the groove, where the groove and blades are realized using a longitudinal cut. The groove is formed by a longitudinal rectilinear slit which opens on longitudinal ends of the plate under the form of widened cut. An independent claim is also included for a guide for implementing anchoring or closing section assemblies connection method.
