Abstract (en)
The riding saddle (200) has a gullet plate (101) which is designed and arranged in a riding saddle (200) so that a foremost part (103) of the gullet plate is situated above the lowermost part (104). When the riding saddle is mounted, gullet plate arms (102) enclosing the back of a horse (11) on its downward facing ends (105) each define a pressure surface (112) with a longitudinal extent that runs parallel to the dorsal vertebrae of the animal.
