Abstract (en)
[origin: EP1811102A1] Floor assembly for placing a floor built up from floorboards on an existing surface, comprising supports for supporting the floorboards, wherein the supports have been built up from several support members that can be placed onto each other, wherein the support members comprise an insertion part and an accommodating counterpart that are adjusted to one another for partially inserting the support members into each other, preferably clampingly. Because the supports have been built up from several support members, they can be placed into each other or be stacked in order to bring the floor at height. It may then suffice that one of these support members that have been placed onto each other is sawn to size. As a result the quantity of waste can remain limited.
