Abstract (en)

[origin: WO2006058977A1] The invention concerns a method for managing a caller's (B) telephone call to a called party, which consists in: detecting the no-response of the called party (A) to the telephone call during a predetermined time, setting up a communication between the caller and a no-response server (130) to transfer at least one message to the caller while maintaining the caller's telephone call to the called party, detecting the response of the called party (A) to the caller's telephone call and if the called party's response to the telephone call is detected, interrupting the communication between the caller and the no-response server and setting up the communication between the caller and the called party. The invention also concerns the related system.
