Abstract (en)

[origin: WO2006072679A1] The invention concerns a damping separator element (1) for producing delimiting or protective barriers, for example for road traffic lanes or motor sports tracks, comprising an elongated horizontal section and including a cover (3), preferably made of flexible plastic material. The invention is characterized in that a central reinforcement or hollow core (2), preferably made of metal, produced in the form of a flattened sheath, extending from one end to the other of said element is housed inside said cover while providing between the latter and said central flattened hollow reinforcement (2) a space filled or to be filled with a plastic foam such as, for example, a polyethylene foam.
