Abstract (en)

[origin: WO2006055010A1] A towel and blanket wrap (10) for an infant is cut in a kite shape. The four corners (12, 14) of the kite configuration are adapted to be worn by an infant such that the first corner(12), the hood portion (60), a double layer of material forming a hood opening covers the baby's head when worn, the lower opposite end portion (34) folds inward over the leg covering to also swaddle baby's arms. To secure baby as well as it's covering; a strap (52) secures all folds together for warmth and protection. Additional types of fastening systems are disclosed as well as shape of material. The kite shaped wrap (10) can be fabricated using several manufacturing techniques.
