Abstract (en)

[origin: EP1857584A2] The washing, spin-drying and/or hot-air-drying machine has an outer drum (53) containing a panel heat exchanger (60). During washing, this is in the washing fluid and heats it. During drying, air is directed to the outside (63) of the heat exchanger and is thus preheated before reaching the inner drum (52) containing the washing. A turning flap (68) can redirect washing fluid and air along the heat exchanger.
