Abstract (en)

The invention relates to an apparatus for dispensing a product from a form-retaining container filled with that product and having an outflow opening. The dispensing apparatus comprises a frame defining a space for accommodating said container, means for supplying a displacing medium to the container, and means for controlling the outflow of product from the container. The displacing medium supply means may include a manually operable pump for compressing ambient air. The outflow control means may be adapted to control movement of a closure member of the container or they may include a controllable closure member themselves.
