Abstract (en)

[origin: DE202006008981U1] The body has system units (1) with outer walls, where each unit is designed as a plate section. Each unit is designed from four frame parts that are separated from each other, where each part forms a frame section with the respective wall. The units are located on top of each other or together, where each section has a recess (2). The units are connected with each other and/or the parts are connected together with connecting units.
