Abstract (en)
[origin: WO2007039511A1] The trays (A) for conveying the punnets (C), in the bottom of which appropriate openings (A1) have been provided conveniently, are crossed by particular elements (33), which are provided with suckers and whose translational motions are predominantly vertical but can also be horizontal if necessary and allow them to lift the punnets (C) from the trays (A) until they encounter pairs of rack-like flaps (43), which pick them up to convey them, by performing a horizontal translational motion, to the conveyor belts or to other means designed to transfer them toward the weighing and packaging stations.
