Abstract (en)
[origin: WO2007091171A2] A frame structure for doors and windows, for furniture or for lightings, having a surface on a same plane of a wall, for receiving at least one fixed or movable closure panel (60) , adapted to be incorporated in a wall (50 and 51) formed by boards (52) or in a brick-wall. The frame defines an aperture with which the closure panel (60) engages having at least one side on a same plane of the wall. The frame is made starting from a main section (1) having tubular cross section having one or more chambers, said main section having a first face at the same side of said aperture and a second face opposite to said aperture, two side faces substantially parallel to said wall, from at least one of said side faces a support wing protruding at right angles. This structure comprises, furthermore, a complementary section (4) suitable for completing to cover the thickness of said wall at said aperture. Furthermore, the frame can provide a section, adapted to be incorporated in a ground, in a ceiling or in a board-wall or in a brick-wall, having a housing for a fixed closure panel, for example for a fixed glass wall, adapted to clamping an edge of the closure panel, and at least one support wing protruding at right angles from a face of the main section oriented towards the closure wing, on an extension of the housing.
