[origin: EP1947027A1] A medical blister pack has a base with a pre-determined number of detents (21) covered by a foil (25) seal. Each detent contains one unit of product (30). The foil has a first inner layer, and a second outer layer (26) incorporating perforation lines (28). On application of a mechanical force on the product the perforation line ruptures to allow mechanical removal of the product from the blister pack (20).
