Abstract (en)

[origin: WO2007054177A1] Fragrant consumer products comprising oxidizing agents are described, which may be, for example, detergents or cleaners or, for example, also cosmetics. These consumer products comprise certain minimum amounts of fragrances of certain classes of substances. They are characterized by very good (storage) stability, both with regard to the fragrance of the product, and also with regard to the potency of the oxidizing agent.
