Abstract (en)

[origin: EP1956156A1] The connector (7) has ribs extending radially from a core and longitudinally on part of length of the connector. Plates (2, 3) are positioned at a determined distance from one another, such that an interval (4) is defined between the plates. A hydraulic mixture is flown in the interval after implantation of an incorporated shuttering wall (1) on site. A backstop type positioning unit positions a flange (14) that maintains an insulating block (5). The block is made of expanded polystyrene and positioned in the interval.
