Abstract (en)

[origin: EP1964978A1] The erection process for a quay involves producing a wall (10) which during the final back-filling with bottom material is anchored with the aid of anchor rods (22) to a rear anchor table (24) over the bottom (14). The bottom material is filled in layers to the top level (16), and the anchor rods are at a horizontal spacing from each other under the water, where they are connected at their ends to the anchor table.
