Abstract (en)

[origin: EP1967454A1] Display box assembly in one piece based on a single sheet which is provided with two large lateral sections, joined by a section which, when the box is assembled, adopts a back position and emerging from the ends of the large lateral front sections one of which is joined by means of a tear line so that it may be removed, and another which has a window which is pre-cut in the factory with finished edges, where it joins the double front, which is fitted in a groove made for this purpose on the double front, with the closing tab being at a lower height than the double front, as this is arranged on its inside face. Due to its configuration, material is not duplicated, the display window is provided with finished edges, and a box is obtained which is easier to stack, and which is made from one piece and its assembly may be mechanised, without the need for any special machinery.
