Abstract (en)

[origin: EP1995029A2] The method involves inserting an insulating element with a longitudinal dimension, which corresponds to a channel length (L) of a molded brick body (2a) by producing a vacuum in the channel. The molded brick body has multiple channels traversing the molded brick body and insulating element (3b) is placed in a number of channels. The inserting of the insulating element takes place simultaneously. An independent claim is also included for a molded brick filling device for filling the molded brick.
