Abstract (en)

[origin: EP1995067A2] The method involves printing an arc-shaped or web-shaped printing substrate in a printing unit (13) of a sheet printing machine (10) i.e. offset sheet printing machine, with a help of printing plates. A plain and/or printed section of the printing substrate is measured. A determined actual value is compared with a print substrate-dependent desired value in order to determine whether the actually used printing substrate is equivalent with respect to characteristics and/or printing substrate data based on comparison, such that one of the printing plates used for printing is manufactured.
