Abstract (en)

A control apparatus for an engine is disclosed. The control apparatus includes a generation control section that controls electric generation by a generator driven by the engine, and an engine control section that, when a start request of the engine is made, drives the starter motor, thereby starting the engine. The generation control section executes a generation restriction process in which the electric generation by the generator is restricted during a period from when the start request is made until when a predetermined period has elapsed after the driving of the starter motor is stopped.
