Abstract (en)

[origin: DE102006044298B3] The method involves detecting the position of number of persons on the image by an evaluation device. The positions are compared in a previous image, and a direction and a speed are respectively assigned by the evaluation device. An accident is detected by reference sample, with which the speed of individual person is smaller within a person flow, and moves it to a center or forms a circle without other person around it.
