Abstract (en)
[origin: EP2068086A1] The method involves visualizing and/or graphically displaying selectable goods to be cooked in a dish region (20) after activating the dish region. Cooking temperature adapted to food is adjusted by a control or regulating device based on formulas stored in a storage device, determined table values, information about a type of cooking good and characteristic variable for cooking amount of each cooking good. The information about a type of cooking good is detected by a sensor device and is inputted by an input device. An independent claim is also included for a cooking device comprising a cooking chamber.
