Abstract (en)

[origin: EP2071068A1] The device has a plastic housing provided with a center hole (100) that is opened towards outside, at lower part (101) facing directly to a support system (3), where the system is placed on tubular elements forming a lower part of a structure of a dryer. A fan is disposed within the housing for sucking air through the center hole and for injecting the air into a volume of the housing such that the air is circulated towards clothes to be dried by air outlets (13, 14), where the fan is formed of a turbine (11) driven by a motor (12). An independent claim is also included for a support system comprising a grid for receiving a lower part of a housing of the device.
