Abstract (en)
[origin: WO2008059163A1] The invention relates to a method for making beer which comprises, in particular, a step of cooking or boiling a wort, and which is characterized in that, in one or more steps which are carried out before said step of cooking or boiling the wort, a reducing gas or mixture of reducing gases is injected into the medium of the step(s) under consideration, so as to lower the oxido-reduction potential of the medium under consideration to a level below what it is when the medium has simply been degassed using a neutral gas.
