Abstract (en)

[origin: WO2008000942A2] The invention relates to a table which can be converted into a bed or a sofa, consisting of at least four frames which are provided with slats and with a deck for one of them and which are intercalated and articulated in pairs by means of pivots, the spatial positioning of which frames, achieved by turning around the frames and inserting one end of a frame between the slats of another, and the locking of their positions using support wedges, making it possible, depending on which frame is on the floor, to obtain a table or a sofa or a bed when all the frames are flat. The invention is particularly intended for people wishing to optimize their living space in a dwelling or a boat.
